

Transatlantic Conference 2010 Logo

Designed by Margaret, daughter of Paul and Helena McCloskey

The logo depicts a couple whose bodies are made of the ichthus symbol and whose heads are wedding bands. They lean towards each other to show the love that connects them and the shape between them is supposed to be evocative of a heart. To represent God's presence in their partnership I have used the image of the dove – its placement is intended to show His presence above, between and around them.
